Intro

Wow! The last newsletter was back in February. I cannot believe that 2 1/2 months have passed already. I have had quite a few showings, went to Sacramento and San Francisco, and have been creating a few new pieces.

What's Up In My Art World?

In March, I went to Sacramento and San Francisco. I love northern California! It was soooooo beautiful! While there I hung out with an old friend, went to Yosemite, Monterey, saw the Golden Gate bridge on a beautifully clear day, and visited with my aunt and her husband. I could definitely see myself having a second residence in California! (see my blog for more details about my trip)

Since I have been home, I have finished several pieces, and have shown fairly regularly on weekends with a local art group. We usually show at Mother Egan's on 6th St in Austin, downtown Round Rock, TX and at Genuine Joe's Coffee house on Anderson Rd in Austin.

I also had a few exhibitions: MOD Coffeehouse and Cafe in Galveston (where I met Melanie Griffith and Erika Alexander from the Cosby Show, and saw Christine Lahti--see my blog for details on these ladies); North Hills Gallery on Far West Blvd; Starbucks on 5th and Lamar; Cafe Mundi on East 5th St.

On April 25-27, I participated in Art in the Square in Southlake, TX (near Dallas) which was an awesome and successful show! I was positioned next to some wonderful, fun and inspiring artists!

The patrons were equally wonderful, fun and great to meet! One of my favorite parts in the art festivals is people-watching. There are so many interesting people to see in the world! And of course I love meeting new and interesting people!

Last weekend, I participated in the Old Pecan St Art Festival in Austin, TX (see my blog for more details). I have to admit that I was quite leery about doing this show, but Pauline (an artist in my art group) convinced me to at least give it a try, and it was a success! So, a special thanks goes to Pauline! I was lucky enough to get in because there was an extra space available. The weekend was quite exciting! Many of my friends (Veronica, Eddie, Sandra, Stan, Melissa, Dawnita, Brian, Jake, Lori, Anita, Leigh, Karen, Janice, Vicky, Phil, Paula, Terry, Lisa, Joyce, Renee, Bruce, Annie) stopped by to say hi! Thanks guys for the support! It was a great show for people watching, and it was super to meet many, many new people as well. I did have an overnight visitor that slept in my tent. He/she left liquid remnants behind. Yuck! There was security, but the person must have entered my tent when the security had passed. It is quite laughable now, but it was quite disgusting on Sunday when I had to remove a urine-soaked velvet cover from my table. Again, Yuck, but Ha Ha!! I will be locking the zippers on my tent from now on. And I will still do the show again. I plan on participating in the fall show so that I can compare the spring show to the fall show. Woohoo!

Artist Plugs

Jamie Rood

I create unique art pieces and inspirational spaces which allow one to enjoy and discover.

Whether it involves a puzzle or simply meditating on the interaction of light, my handcrafted work can be enjoyed as focal conversation pieces or key parts of an inspirational environment.

Versatility of working in virtually any medium (from digital to portable lightweight to permanent outdoor installations) allows me creative freedom to produce works that are beyond traditional classification – imagination is more important than the medium...

Typically I use hydrostone and resins with acrylic paint for indoor pieces and concrete (or Gardencast) stained with acid, Lucite acrylic sheets which I heat form, and copper for outdoor pieces. My prints are of archival quality using Epson Ultrachrome K3 inks.

New Kids On The Block (for my sister, a long time fan)

“The Right Stuff” really is — at long last — returning to your block. Thankfully, this time, it’s all happening in the right way too.

New Kids On The Block — five now fully-grown men who forever defined what the modern boy band would look and sound like — are back together for the very first time in nearly a decade and a half, and currently hard at work on their first new album since 1994. That still untitled album should be released sometime this summer, preceded by the New Kid's first new single since the Nineties, and followed in the fall by an already hotly anticipated international concert tour.
